

The Bohm Theatre Albion's Historic Landmark

In the Superior Street National Historic District, residing alongside Albion's red brick street, the Bohm Theatre has stood as an entertainment center for nearly eight decades. Opened in 1929 by musician and theater aficionado George Bohm, the Bohm Play-House, as it was once called, retains much of its original character and architectural elements.

Once a venue for movies as well as stage plays, lectures and musical reviews, the Bohm eventually became a multi-plex with three screens, before closing in 2008 due to absentee ownership that contributed to disrepair.

In 2012, with the enthusiastic support of the local community, The Friends of the Bohm Theatre and the Albion Community Foundation publically launched Lights, Camera, Action: A Campaign to Bring the Silver Screen Back to Albion to raise funds to return the theatre to its single screen origins, update the projection equipment, and create a venue for live performances.

Contributors to the Lights, Camera, Action campaign may want to direct their donation to Name A Seat! in honor of an individual or a business.
